WEATHER OBSERVATIONS.

Rain or snow from the Pacific coast to the Missouri valley and Minnesota is resulting from an area of low pressure which overlies the Pacific coast and the Rocky mountain plateau and extends from the south-eastern plateau states northeastward to Wisconsin. The northwestern high is central over Saskatchewan and temperatures of 24 to 40 degrees below zero are reported from that province and southward to Minnesota. Snow is indicated for this vicinity tonight and will probably Wednesday, with some blizzard.

The present high stage of the Mississippi at Davenport is due largely to a sharp falling stage prevails at Leavenworth, where the stage is but 4.5 feet, and a fall should begin at Davenport as soon as a break in the gorge occurs.
